SUPPLEMENTARY NOTE.

CHAPTERS I AND II.

PHYSICAL ASPECTS AND HISTORY.

There is nothing important to add to the information contained under each of these heads in the corresponding chapters of the original Gazetteer.

CHAPTER III.

THE PEOPLE.

The population of the district which was 462,052 in 1901 has risen to 600,643 according to the census of 1911. The number of villages has similarly risen from 1,401 to 2,135, and the density from 117 to 152 to the square mile. Population and Density.

In the last census report the number of immigrants resident in the district has been given at 118,243. The number of natives of this district who were resident in other districts at the same time was found to be 17,815. The main factor contributing towards the increase in the foreign population is the migration of cultivating Muhammadans from the neighbouring districts of Bengal. They are chiefly attracted by the waste and the chur lands which they can obtain under comparatively favourable terms directly from the zamindars. Migration.

The result of the last census shows that there has been a slow but steady increase in the number of persons afflicted with the four special infirmities which were selected for record, though the proportion is still very high as compared with the rest of Assam. Infirmities.

In 1912-13 25 villages were found to be infected with this malady within the jurisdiction of the Dudnai thana and 6 villages within the Goalpara thana. The disease has spread in this district within recent years. Kala-azar.

Language.

In the original Gazetteer it is stated that at the census of 1901 Bengali was returned as the language of 69 per cent. and Assamese as the language of only 3 per cent. of the population. This distribution has been hotly questioned, and the recent census discloses the revised percentages of 53 and 19 for Bengali and Assamese, respectively. The Superintendent of the Census Operations was inclined to the opinion that even these figures gave an under-estimate of those speaking Assamese. The discrepancy has no doubt largely arisen owing to the fact that Goalpara being a border district between Bengal and Assam proper, its language inevitably partakes of the nature of that spoken in both provinces. In very few localities is a pure dialect spoken, and the mixture of Bengali and Assamese which does duty in any particular locality shows a predominance of one language or the other according to its geographical propinquity to one province or the other. Government has recently declared that both Assamese and Bengali shall be deemed to be the court and the school languages in the district.

Jugis.

A movement among this small community is slowly in progress towards the adoption of the sacred Brahminic thread. They explain their origin as being the descendants of a Jogi or Jogis (persons who observed joga or abstract contemplation). They resent the low status given to them in the social scale and assert that their present tribal name is a demeaning perversion of the Sanskrit word "Jogi".

Meches.

Within recent years a definite movement towards Hinduisation among this community has been very marked. The new party so formed call themselves Brohmos, or the believers in Brahmo, the Supreme Soul. They conceive the infinite as the source of Light and they took upon the Sun as his visible representation. Their views are monotheistic and they have not submitted to the Brahminic superiority and the observance of the caste rules. They have discarded idolatry in all its forms. They abstain from drink and characterise indulgence in it as a social and religious vice. They accept the Gayatri as the most suitable form of prayer to the Almighty. As a reactionary step, some influential members of this community have taken to Orthodoxy; they have adopted the Hindu forms of idolatry and are becoming strict in the observance of caste rules and Brahminic rites. They thus attempt to identify themselves as a sub-caste of the Hindus.

The spread of education among this community is in proportion to its other activities. There are two boarding houses at Dhubri which afford accommodation to the Mech and the Braham boys reading in the High School.

The Rajbansis are now trying to identify themselves with the Khyatrias of Aryyabarta. Their tradition is that they came here with a view to conceal their identity when Parasurama was leading a devastating campaign against the Khyatrias. They have adopted the sacred thread and have reduced the period of their mourning from 30 to 12 days. This has led to misunderstanding if not positive ill-feeling between the Rajbansis on the one hand and the Brahmins and the Kayasthas on the other. Naturally some of the high caste Kayasthas are jealous of the attempt on the part of the Rajbansis to secure a position over them in the social scale.

The last census report shows that 56 per cent. of the population returned themselves as Hindus, 35 per cent. as Muhammadans, and 8 per cent. as Animists. Religion.

The noticeable features are the great increase in the number of the Muhammadan population which is attributable to their influx from the neighbouring districts of Bengal, and the increase in the number who returned themselves as Hindus, an increase which is counterbalanced, and no doubt accounted for, by a corresponding reduction in the number of those returned as Animists.

CHAPTER IV.

AGRICULTURE AND FORESTS.

Jute. The growing of jute is gradually gaining ground. The rise in the jute market has made this cultivation a lucrative enterprise.

Live stock. There has been an enormous increase in the number of Nepalese cattle in the Eastern Duars.

An important cattle market is held at Gauripur at which large numbers of imported up-country bullocks are disposed of. Of recent years there has been a general rise of about 50 per cent. in the price of cattle.

The occupation of fallow lands by immigrants has made pasture land scarce in some parts of the district. Within the last few years grazing grounds have been reserved for the use of village cattle in 69 villages in the Duars.

Classification of reserved forests. The total area covered by reserved forests is 884 square miles. In 1909 a new reserve was constituted in the Ai valley known as the Ai reserve and covering an area of 61,919 acres.

The zamindari forests. The zamindari forests are usually worked by the issue of permits at a fixed fee to gangs of wood-cutters under the leadership of a Jhar-dafadar. When the timber is ready, the zamindar has it checked, but does not realise the price payable to him, until after the timber has been sold. In some estates rent is charged for the ground used for stacking the timber. In Mechpara, a certain contribution is levied in the name of the family god of the zamindars, who in addition even now exercise the primitive right of appropriating the best pair of poles in a stack for their personal use. Of the ultimate sale-proceeds of the timber, the zamindar usually receives a 6-anna share, the balance going to the actual cutters.

CHAPTER V.

ARTS AND INDUSTRIES.

In 1913, the total acreage under tea was 707 acres, Tea, the total output of tea being 276,290lbs.

CHAPTER VI.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.

It is in contemplation to supersede Act VIII of 1869 which is now in force by a more comprehensive Tenancy Act. Civil litigation is on the increase. The immigration of people from the neighbouring districts the rise in the price of land and the better appreciation by the people of their rights and interests are the main causes influencing this increase. Within recent years the rents of the tenants in Karaibari and Gauripur have been enhanced by about 25 per cent. The jotedari units have spread over this district from the neighbouring Bengal tracts. The zamindars have found this system convenient to work, because under this practice the whole estate is divided into a number of holdings or jotes of considerable extent which are settled with a body of tenants known as jotedars. These jotedars are practically middlemen, and the zamindars are thus saved the trouble of dealing directly with the innumerable cultivators, who can get their lands only from the jotedars.

In 1913, the area reserved for these colonists was 30,000 bighas, of which they had brought a little over half under actual cultivation. The Santhals are no longer allowed the concession of holding land on favourable terms for the first few years of occupation. They are now liable to pay revenue even for their homestead land.

The Santhal Colony.

- Wages. The increase in the daily wages of a coolie is enormous. The rate now ranges from eight annas to a rupee per diem. Domestic servants likewise charge from Rs. 6 to Rs. 8 per mensem in addition to their food. Both coolies and domestic servants are gradually getting scarce. Menial servants come mostly from up-country and Kamrup.
- Prices. Prices have similarly risen. The average number of seers of common rice which could be purchased for a rupee in the decade 1903—1912 being only 9·8 as compared with 11·9 seers for the preceding decade and 20·5 seers for the period 1863—1872. Pulse is now selling at Rs. 4·9-6 per maund as compared with Rs. 2·8 in 1903.
- Means of communication—steamers. The steamers do not carry the mails now, and there is only one daily passenger service between Dhubri and Gauhati.
- Railways. The Golakganj extension of the Eastern Bengal State Railway to Amingaon was opened in 1910. Two trains run daily each way and one of them carries the mails. Both the trains connect with the Assam-Bengal Railway at Gauhati.
- The roads on the North bank. There are four roads on the North bank maintained by the Public Works Department. The Trunk road passes through the Duars, commencing from the Sankosh and running up to Raha in the Kamrup district, the total length being nearly 68 miles. There are inspection bungalows on the road at the following places, the figures within brackets indicating the length of the stage in miles: Sankosh (Dainamari), Kachagaon (14½), Patgaon (11), Sidli (14½), Chapaguri (7), Bijai (10) and Raha (11). A road from Dhubri meets the Trunk road at Kachagaon at a distance of about 50 miles. There are inspection bungalows on this road at the following places: Balajan (10), Paglabat (9½), Tamarhat (7), Gossagaon (13½) and Kachagaon (10½). A road from Jogighopa, 23½ miles long, meets the Trunk road at Chapaguri with inspection bungalows on it at Kabaitari (1½), North Salmara (10), and Chapaguri (12½). Another road from Chapar, 16 miles long, meets the Trunk road at Sidli. There are a large number of roads maintained by the Local Board, the total mileage being 205.45. The longest is known as the Gauripur-Raha road. There are inspection bungalows at Manipur (17½), Bilasipara (9½), Salkocha (8½), Chapar (8), Moligaon (7), North Salmara (9) and Raha (17½). In addition the following inspection bungalows on several minor roads are maintained by the Dhubri Local Board: Kokrajhar, Agomony, Sasargaon, Datma, Tipkai and Golakganj. The continuation of the Gauripur-Raha road beyond Champunati is maintained by the Goalpara Local Board, the distance being 29 miles within the limits of the subdivision. The inspection bungalows at Moligaon, North Salmara and Goalpara on the Raha road are maintained by this Board.

There are inspection bungalows on the South Trunk road running from Kakripara to Dhubdhara at the following places: Singimari (15 miles from Kakripara), Patakata (11), Fakinganj (11), Lengrabhita (9), Lakhipur (9½), Baida (9½), Aia (10½), Krishnai (8½), Rangjuli (13¾) and Dhubdhara (11½). The roads south of the Brahmaputra.

The Goalpara Local Board maintains 161 miles of road on the southern bank with inspection bungalows at Kharmaza, Marnai, Dudnai and Dalgoma.

The following are combined figures for this district and the Garo Hills district for the year 1912-13:— Post and Telegraph.

Guma...	26...	A compact block about 30 miles from Dhubri along the north trunk road. The forest is almost pure sal intersected by strips of low-lying and swampy ground. A few trees only are found associated with sal chiefly dillenia pentagyna , careya arborea , stereulia villosa ; the low lands are gradually filling up with machilus odoratissima . The undergrowth consists mainly of chrodendron infortunatum .	22,361	8,453	5,183	18,442	10,756	11,205
Ripu ...	235...	Situated along the foot of the Bhutan hills between the Sankosh and Faralbhanga rivers. Generally flat. Sal occurs on the high land between the rivers but is intersected by large areas of grass. The grass lands which have been successfully protected from fire are gradually filling up with soft woods. Khair and Sisu occur along the Sankosh, Kamra, Hail and Saralbhanga rivers.	39,411	29,004	27,200	111,603	57,307	68,681
Kachugaon	66...	A tract of land south of the Ripu reserve made over to the Forest Department for the establishment of forest villages in order to supply labour for forest work. Chirang 234...		Situated on the east of Ripu Reserve between the Saralbhanga and the Bhur rivers. The northern portion contains a considerable area of evergreen forest which has been little exploited so far. The southern portion is stocked with sal and with the exception of swampy depressions and water courses is almost fully stocked principally with pole growth.
Bengtal 23...		Is connected at the north-west corner by a narrow neck with the Chirang Reserve. Contains sal in clumps with large areas of grass. The latter is, however, gradually filling up with soft woods and sal along the eastern border. The forest is generally somewhat inferior in growth.	58,615	58,144	40,461	21,705	87,155	24,807
Bhureswar Hill. 7 ...		An isolated hill situated south-east of Sidli. Slope steep. Highest point is 1,637 feet above mean sea-level, contains sal both pure and associated with a few other kinds but more than half is grass land or steep slopes with bare rock.
Bijni... 196		Situated at the foot of the Bhotan hill between the Burai and Manas rivers. A large number of streams intersect the area, and generally have Khair and Sisui on both banks. Simul (Bombax Malabaricum) is making rapid progress and this will probably be the dominant species in time. Large areas of grass occur between the river-beds, in which soft woods are gradually making their appearance.	...	2	...	6,076	155	15,624
Ail ... 97...		Mixed evergreen forest, dense undergrowth of canes and creepers. The predominating species are Khair, Sisui, etc.
